Katarzyna Piquette, CEO and Founder of Canadian Energy Ventures, together with Kyle Koss, President of ATCO Ventures, presented their vision and opportunities for cooperation between Poland and Canada in the field of energy technologies.
The discussion focused on the role of innovative solutions in the energy transition as well as the potential for transatlantic business and technological collaboration. The central element of the presentation was the concept of modular “data centres in the box” as an example of modern technology supporting the development of digital and energy infrastructure. The speakers discussed the benefits for the European market, particularly in the context of the growing demand for efficient and scalable IT solutions and their integration with renewable energy systems (RES).
The presentation emphasized the importance of knowledge exchange and partnerships between companies from Poland and Canada in order to accelerate the implementation of innovations and build a competitive position for both markets in the area of sustainable energy and modern infrastructure.
